

Dreadfully Amazing Experiments

LO:

I can write a conclusion for an explanation text.

I can write in a given style successfully.

I can use key features of a given text.

RECALL:

Have a look at the plan that you made on Friday.

What will you write about in the third paragraph?

	Content	Features	What are you going to change?
3	Leave the reader wanting more and feeling excited about science	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Rhetorical question</li> <li>- Humour: advice and joke</li> </ul>	Come up with your own exaggerations (jokes) - make sure they're based on a fact and not too silly!

Explosive Experiments

Nick Arnold

Here's a final piece of horribly funny advice from our experts. Have you ever had a secret urge to pick your nose? You probably already eat enough of it! Every day you swallow over two cups of snot. I prefer a nice cup of tea myself.

Guided Write

Dreadfully Amazing Experiments

Mr Diamond

Don't switch off yet - turn the light bulb back on - because here's a final piece of dreadfully incredible and hilarious piece of advice. Have you ever felt an overwhelmingly strong desire to pick your nose? You should think twice before you do it! It's almost unbelievable but it's true; we drink two cups of snot everyday. Personally, I'd rather a refreshing cup of juice.

Now it's your turn!

After you finish, upload a photo of your work onto ClassDojo.